

New HAEF Website Interface

On Thursday, December 4nd, 2008 the new interface of the website of the Hellenic-American Educational Foundation is open to the public.

The objectives for the renewal of the website interface are to increase its “user friendliness” and its usefulness. In other words, the College (Athens College and Psychico College) wants the visitors to its electronic portal to find easily what they are looking for and to comprehend quickly the breadth and the depth of the School and its various services and activities. The different points of the access on the homepage will lead to the underlying organization and functions of the College. Links will take him/her to related topics within and outside of our website.

It should be noted that the revised English version of the website features translations of the basic components of the main Greek version. Those sections of the website relating to our English programs and to activities normally conducted in English, are in English in both versions. While some components of the Greek version have a complete English counterpart, at this point we do not contemplate translating the whole Greek version into English.

The College’s website will not be a static document. On a regular basis new topics will be added and new features developed. The “College in Motion” image will change frequently. The archive will provide a glimpse of the rhythms and activities that add up to a school year. Our visitors are encouraged to contribute to improving the website by making comments and suggestions.

Welcome to the College!
