The Tigger Project

One day I brought a little stuffed animal to school and told the students that we are going to learn a lot of things about tigers. I showed them many pictures and each student had the opportunity to take the little stuffed animal home for two nights. The students also started a diary and wrote what they did with Tigger at home. They read what they had written in the diary to the rest of the class.

Then I gave each student a number of excerpts which they had to rewrite themselves, learn the new vocabulary and read it in class.

I collected all the essays which they had written and they pasted them onto big, colored pieces of paper which eventually became a big book with lots of pictures.

We also watched a DVD about tigers, colored pictures and made miniature paper tigers. We had lots of fun and this was the outcome.
